SENIOR EXERCISES

At 9:30 on Saturday morning the Seniors, numbering fifty-seven, began their Class Day exercises with their usual service in the Chapel, led by Dr. Thomas Hume. These exercises are strictly private, none but Seniors attending. The purpose, as Dr. Hume put it, was to give the class a quiet moment of prayer before the more elaborate ceremonies began.

At 10:30 the class assembled again in the Chapel where before a large audience the more formal exercises took place. The program was as follows:

President's Address—O. R. Rand.
Class History—T. W. Andrews.
Class Prophecy—H. B. Gunter.
Presentation of Gift—J. W. Hester.
Last Will and Testament—M. L. Wright.

Mr. Rand is from Smithfield, Johnston County, and was recently awarded the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford University from North Carolina. His theme was "Education and Democracy," emphasis being put upon the part played in a democracy by the average citizen:

"Of the different types of government evolved since the organization of society into the State, Democracy is best adapted to the needs of society and most conducive to the development of the individual. Democracy means the rule of the many as opposed to the rule of the one or of the few. It means the rule of the people, and it gives to the individual the greatest freedom of activity and the largest opportunity for development.

"In a democracy the vital unit is the average citizen. The value of democracy as a form of government depends upon the character of the average citizen. And as the average citizen has a high character, as he is educated and developed, so will society be successful. It is the average citizen who must solve national problems. It is the voter who must solve public questions. And upon the character of the voter, upon the character of the average citizen depends the correct solution of these questions.

"Upon the average citizen depends the value of the principle of popular election. It is the average citizen who must apply the principle of popular election. He must elect our public officials. And if we are to have a high class of public officials we must have a high class of voters. If we are to have capable public officials we must have an intelligent body politic.

"Not only must the average citizen apply the principle of popular election, but he must administer the jury system also. The jury system as an instrument for administering justice is faultless in theory, but its efficient operation depends upon the character of the men who compose the jury. And if the jury system is to be an efficient system in practice, we must maintain a high standard of intelligence among the people."

Mr. Hester, in announcing the class gift, said that each member of the class would contribute not less than two dollars a year for the next ten years. This sum will be put out at interest and the sum total probably applied to the erection of a building for the use chiefly of the literary societies.

At 5:30 the class gathered around the historic Davie Poplar, the most famous tree in the State. First came the reading of the class statistics compiled by Mr. James A. Gray, Jr., of Winston-Salem. The total age of the class foots up 1,307 years, the average being 23, the actual ages ranging from 30 to 18. Other distinctions follow: Tallest man, Huffman, 6 feet 3; shortest, Umstead, 5 feet 5; heaviest, Cobb, 192; most studious, Speas; most notable ink-slinger, Phillips; best-read, Andrews; broadest minded, Robins; best and also most all-round athlete, Singletary; shrewdest, Gray; best singer and dancer, Orr; best looking, Britt; biggest bluff, Simmons and Williams; most popular, Hester.

When these were read a half-dozen songs, patriotic and humorous, were sung by the class in true college style. The giving of yells, smoking the pipe of peace, burning of the senior benches, and the taking of the class picture ended the afternoon exercises.

It should be added that eight of the Junior class have attained to membership in the Phi Beta Kappa. These are F. E. Winslow, of Hertford, who will be president; Frank P. Graham, of Charlotte, who will be secretary; Kemp D. Battle, of Rocky Mount; W. L. Long, of Garysburg; C. W. Tillett, Jr., of Charlotte; J. M. Costner, of Raleigh; H. P. Osborne, of Jacksonville, Fla., and David D. Oliver, of Mount Olive. The presidency goes to the man with the highest average. Mr. Winslow excelled Mr. Graham in the three years' work by only one-fiftieth of a point.

LITERARY SOCIETIES

Reunion meetings were held by the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies in their respective halls at 7:30, Saturday evening. The number of the old alumni present made these meetings peculiarly interesting and impressive.

At 9:30 the annual joint banquet of the Dialectic and Philanthropic Societies was held in Commons Hall. Mr. John W. Hester, of the graduating class, presided and made the opening speech. Short addresses were then made by Mr. R. R. Williams, Di, of Asheville; Mr. T. R. Eagles. Jr., Phi, of the graduating class; Mr. D. P. Stern, Phi, of Greensboro, and Mr. Milo J. Jones, Di, of the rising Senior class.

The guest of honor and the special orator of the occasion was Judge Jeter C. Pritchard, of the United States Circuit Court. Judge Pritchard was born in Jonesboro, Tennessee, in 1857. He was United States Senator from North Carolina from 1894 to 1903, and has held his present appointment since 1904. The subject of his address was "The History of the Judiciary," and though he did not begin to speak until midnight he held the close attention of his audience for more than an hour and amply vindicated his reputation for legal learning and forceful presentation. Only a few extracts from Judge Pritchard's address can be given here. On the question of the right of the judiciary to pass upon the constitutionality of legislative acts, he spoke in part as follows:

"Thus, it will be seen that the idea of clothing the judiciary with the power of reviewing the constitutionality of legislative acts, did not originate along with the Supreme Court of the United States, in the convention of 1787, but was an idea which the American people were, even at that time, already not only familiar with but definitely attached to.

"The first instance in which this power seems to have been exercised by a Federal court, was in Hayburne's case in 1791, in which the judges of a United States Circuit Court refused to exercise functions imposed upon them by act of Congress because the act was inconsistent with the constitution.

"In 1803 the question came for the first time before the Supreme Court of the United States, in the celebrated case of Marbury vs. Madison, in which Chief Justice Marshall decided against the constitutionality of a statute which enlarged the jurisdiction of that court at the expense of the executive department and rendered a decision of such convincing and irrefutable logic that the question was settled forever. In his opinion he said:

" 'The powers of the Legislature are defined and limited. To what purpose is that limitation committed to writing, if these limits may, at any time, be passed by those intended to be restrained. * * * It is a proposition too plain to be contested that either the constitution controls any legislative act repugnant to it or that the Legislature may alter the constitution by an ordinary act. Between these two alternatives there is no middle ground. The constitution is either a superior paramount law * * * or it is on a level with ordinary legislative acts. * * * If the former part of the alternative be true, then a legislative act contrary to the constitution is not law; if the latter part be true, then written constitutions are absurd attempts on the part of the people to limit a power in its own nature illimitable.'

"In 1816, in the great case of McCullough vs. Maryland, Chief Justice Marshall, while sustaining a statute which had been attacked on the ground that it was an undue assumption of power by Congress, again expressed himself about the exercise of this novel function of passing on the constitutionality of a statute, saying:

" 'Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited but consist with the letter and spirit of the constitution, are constitutional. Should Congress, however, in the exercise of its powers, adopt measures which are prohibited by the constitution; or should Congress, under pretext of exceeding its powers, pass laws for the accomplishment of objects not entrusted to the government, it would become the painful duty of this tribunal, should a case requiring such decision come before it, to say that such an act was not the law of the land. But where the law is not prohibited and is really calculated to effect any of the objects entrusted to the government, to undertake to enquire here into the degree of its necessity would be to pass the line which circumscribes the judicial department and to tread on legislative ground. This court disclaims all pretensions to such powers.'

"When we consider these interpretations of this, the greatest of judicial powers, and the impartial, disinterested and moderate exercise of that power which led the court to first overthrow a statute designed to extend its own prerogatives, and then to sustain a statute alleged to be an undue assumption of power by a co-ordinate branch of government, we may join with William Pinckney in saying that we see, in these omens, 'a pledge of immortality of the Union.' "

The conclusion of his address was as follows:

"The individual who insists that the courts have no power to declare an act of the national or State Legislature invalid proclaims a doctrine no less dangerous to the public welfare than he who by corrupt means seeks to pollute the fountain of justice so as to prevent a fair and impartial consideration of questions which may be presented to the courts for consideration.

"The judges of this country with rarest exceptions, have been exempt from criticism calculated to affect their integrity. This is a splendid tribute to the wisdom and foresight of the framers of the constitution, and while it is a guarantee of the stability of our institutions, at the same time it reflects great credit upon the character of the American people.

"To adopt the theory of those who profess to believe that the courts are without authority to declare a legislative act unconstitutional, would be to reverse the uniform policy of this government from its foundation until this good hour. It would be the accomplishment of that which was declared otherwise when the constitution was adopted and which has been finally and forever settled by the highest courts, both State and national.

"There is a growing tendency on the part of many to incline to theories that are wholly inconsistent with our distinctive form of government, and while at present they are making but little headway, it should be constantly borne in mind that 'eternal vigilance is the price of liberty.' It might with equal propriety be said that the perpetuity of our institutions depends upon the vigilance of those who believe in the doctrines enunciated by Washington, Hamilton, Madison, Jefferson, Chief Justice Marshall and the other patriots to whose wisdom and courage we are indebted for the splendid heritage which we now enjoy.

"Under our system of government a citizen may lie down at night and rest undisturbed as to the safety of his life and property, and this ideal condition is due to the fact that the strong arm of the law prevails, and is supreme on every inch of soil beneath the Stars and Stripes. This condition was made possible as a result of the fair and impartial administration of justice by a judiciary whose sole ambition was to enforce the law in accordance with the written constitution drafted by those who sacrificed their all in order that their descendants might be exempt from the acts of tyranny and injustice which inspired them to take the initiative in a movement the like of which in magnitude and importance had never been undertaken by any people on the face of the earth.

"I firmly believe that an overwhelming majority of the American people fully appreciate the strength of our government as now constituted, as well as the many blessings that flow therefrom, and while we are occasionally confronted by the spasmodic efforts of those who know not what they do, and whose counsel, if heeded, would disrupt our government, nevertheless I have an abiding faith in the American people, and I cannot believe that the time will ever come when a government of the people, for the people and by the people shall perish from the face of the earth."

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

Before an audience of at least twelve hundred people, Rt. Reverend Thomas F. Gailor, Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Tennessee, preached the baccalaureate sermon from the text, "And Jesus increased in wisdom," Luke 2:52. The exercises began at 11 a. m. and were held in Memorial Hall. The following summary hardly does justice to the force and suggestiveness of Bishop Gailor's discourse: It is easier to have right convictions of truth than it is to live up to them. Many business and professional men have one code for Sunday and another for the week. There are breaches of ethical rules in the habits of the people and in the ways of society in which even Christians sometimes acquiesce and by which the soul's loftiest ideals are contradicted. Men go on acting as though God could be mocked with impunity, and the eternal law of righteousness could be altered to suit individual notions of right. There are some things, as the matter of temperance, purity and honesty, which we say come naturally within the sphere of our religion as sins against God. But how many would admit that the mere misuse of time and failure to perform college duties is a failure on the part of our religion. The cause lies in a vague impression that Godliness has nothing to do with reason; that the fear of God and faith in Him can be passed without the use of the mind.

The divorcement of religion from reason is encouraged by people of two classes. Those of the first think that the best kind of Christianity comes with ignorance. They have set their hearts on what they call inward peace. Cursed with poor achievements and low ideals, they dare to sit in judgment on others. Let us have peace, but let it be the peace of knowledge, not of ignorance; of light, not darkness. The other class contains those who call themselves the enlightened people of the world. They rail against dogma, and yet the great truth they are always quoting, the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, is mere dogma, the definite intellectual exposition of Christian faith.

The object of Christians then is not to discourage the use of the intellect, but to emphasize the solemn obligation to pursue the brightest knowledge. It is the eternal sense of the obligation within us to know every masterpiece of literature, every discovery of science, every beauty of art sprung from the fountain of eternal knowledge. The distinction between sacred and profane in things intellectual has been outlived. Every university is religious which tries to inspire the young with love of truth.

SERMON BEFORE THE Y. M. C. A.

The sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association was preached in Gerrard Hall on Sunday evening by Dr. Egbert Watson Smith, Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church of Louisville, Kentucky. His text was "Learn of me," Matthew 11:29. He spoke in substance as follows, his sermon taking the form of five propositions:

The first proposition was that character is the supreme essential and crown of manhood. The name of a certain brilliant New York Senator you never see now in the newspapers. It has sunk into an obscurity, total and pathetic. A few years ago that name was ever before the public eye as the synonym of wit and eloquence and popularity. Suddenly the discovery came that character was lacking, and with one consent the people buried him alive. The supremacy of character is the teaching not only of your heart but of science. The supreme distinction that lifts man above the brute is his moral and spiritual nature, the capacity for his giving and thirsting after righteousness.

The second proposition was that in the realm of character Jesus Christ is the world's greatest master. Third, since character is the goal of manhood and since Christ is the supreme master in that realm, it follows that to attain the highest in character we must put ourselves under the guidance of Christ. This proposition is based on the self-evident fact that our best guide in any region of matter, of mind, is the man who has most thoroughly mastered that region.

Fourth, the student must expect to have many of his pre-suppositions corrected by the larger knowledge of the Great Master. This requires no proof. It is true in every branch of thought and effort. When the student in character comes to the Supreme Master in this realm, one of his first surprises is the discovery that the attainment of the highest in character is a vastly larger undertaking than he had dreamed of.

The last proposition was that the sensible student will take his first lesson first, and Christ's first lesson is "Follow Me," not a book or a theology or an institution, but a person. Whatever our doubts and difficulties, this much is clear: that it is our duty to follow the best we know and that Christ is the best we know; and, therefore, it is our duty, nay our privilege, to follow Him.

REUNION EXERCISES

Reunion exercises of the alumni began in Gerrard Hall at 10:30 a. m., Thomas S. Kenan presiding. Prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. R. H. Marsh, of Oxford, who graduated nearly half a century ago. The presence of a score or more of men from a dozen States, who graduated here in 1858, 1859, 1860 and 1861, made the reunion historic and memorable. When the band played "Dixie" these old fellows led the applause with the fervor that characterized the reception of that great air when it led the charge to battle.

Dr. Venable spoke of the pleasure of the University receiving back the old alumni and particularly glad were they to welcome back the classes who came just previous to the war. It was regretted that Dr. A. D. Hepburn, the only surviving member of the faculty of 1859 was absent. A letter from him was read, expressing his regret that his health would not permit his undertaking the trip, saying that it was a grievous regret he could not reunite with his old students

The class of 1858 was first called — only two present, Dr. Marsh and Francis M. Johnson, of Davie county. Dr. Marsh read the history of the class. The class of 1858 numbered 96 out of 470 students. "Killed in battle" was the termination of the brief biography of many.

The class of 1859 was next called. Mr. James P. Coffin, of Arkansas, read the history of the class. The class of 1859 had 119 members as freshmen. He spoke eloquently of the devotion of the class and the honors they won as Southern soldiers and officers. He paid high tribute to Judge Clark's history of North Carolina in the war. He declared that wherever the battle raged the hottest "in what we then thought and what we now know was a war for our dearest liberties," the class of 1859 did their duty as God gave them to see that duty. He told of individual acts of heroism. Edward Satterfield, a member of the class of 1859, enabled North Carolina to claim "farthest at Appomattox." Others won imperishable glory. He then turned to the civil life and enumerated the strong men his class had furnished. He spoke with eloquence and wit and was frequently applauded by the audience, who enjoyed every word that he said with a feeling that was contagious. He closed with a touching hope that, as they would never meet again here, they might be undivided in the Great Beyond.

The class of 1860, with four representatives, had no representative to speak. Those present were Thomas W. Davis, of Raleigh; R. A. Bullock, of Williamston; A. S. Barbee, of Chapel Hill; George W. Askew, of Mississippi.

The class of 1861 was represented by four, and at the request of Mr. Bellamy, its spokesman, Mr. Coffin read the history that had been prepared. Those present were B. M. Collins, of Warren; J. C. Bellamy, of Townsville; W. R. Bond, of Scotland Neck; and C. H. Barrow, of Edgecombe.

Most of its members went into the Civil War. There were eighty-seven graduates in that class, only 30 being present, the balance having gone to the war before commencement, but they were given their diplomas — Captain Benjamin M. Collins, of Warren, fired the last gun; J. M. Poteat won honors at Bethel, and others achieved distinction. Bond's "Pickett or Pettigrew" has given North Carolina its proud place and a high tribute was paid to Bond. The tribute to Lieut. Col. J. T. Jones by Major Stedman was read and it was applauded. The roll of names showed many strong men, among the most conspicuous being Major C. M. Stedman, Col. J. Turner Morehead, ex-Judge Spier Whitaker.

The class of 1883 was then called — it numbered 13 graduates, (42 having entered as freshmen) but had no representative present.

The class of 1898 was then called and the class history was given by Paul C. Whitlock, Esq. of the Charlotte Bar. The class of 1903 held their exercises at 5 p. m.

The following are the rosters of the classes. These are imperfect and the editors of the Record request that corrections and missing data be sent them so that the lists may be full and correct.

OTHER EXERCISES

The Alumni Luncheon was held in Commons Hall immediately after the reunion exercises. President Venable's address of welcome was heartily applauded, and Colonel Kenan, master of ceremonies, appointed Major W. A. Guthrie toastmaster. Most of the speeches were made by graduates of ante-bellum days. They dealt interestingly with reminiscences of the olden times, and for two hours the three hundred guests were entertained by rare sallies of wit and by racy stories told as only good raconteurs can tell them.

The Inter-Society Debate was held in Gerrard Hall at 8:30 Monday evening. The query was: "Resolved, That all interstate railways should be incorporated by the federal government". Mr. D. P. Stern presided, and Mr. W. W. Michaux served as secretary. The Di debaters, Messrs. O. C. Cox and M. J. Jones, upheld the affirmative; the Phi debaters, Messrs. W. M. Gaddy and J. W. Umstead, Jr., defending the negative. The judges, Mr. Paul Whitlock, Judge Crawford Biggs, and Dr. J. E. Brooks, rendered the decision in favor of the negative.

The finale of Alumni Day was the reception tendered the alumni and visiting guests by the President and Faculty in the new Library. Many hundreds were present, and the new Library was universally conceded to be not only the most beautiful building on the campus but also an ideal place for the annual reception.

ORATIONS FOR THE MANGUM MEDAL

Only three members of the graduating class were selected by the faculty committee this year to deliver addresses. These were Mr. P. M. Williams, Mr. T. L. Simmons, and Mr. W. P. Stacy. Mr. Williams, whose subject was "The Function of Law in the Life of the People", was prevented from speaking by sickness. Mr. Simmons spoke on "The Needs of Popular Government", and Mr. Stacy on "American Democracy and its Third Crisis". The medal was awarded to Mr. Stacy.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE RETIREMENT OF DR. BATTLE

The resolutions of the Board of Trustees in regard to the retirement of Kemp P. Battle were presented by Mr. Paul B. Means. In presenting the resolutions Mr. Means paid a just and worthy tribute to Dr. Battle's long life of service both to the State and the University after which he read the resolutions which embodied the praise, respect, and thanks of the board which were unanimously adopted.

RESOLUTIONS

Now, after hearing the foregoing statement, the Trustees of the University of North Carolina, at a meeting held, in special honor of Dr. Kemp P. Battle, in Memorial Hall, on commencement day, June 2d, 1908, do, thereupon, Resolve:

1. That we approve the facts stated therein as true and just commendations of Dr. Kemp P. Battle.

2. That we sincerely regret his resignation in its severance of his relations officially, except as trustee and emeritus professor of history, with the University of North Carolina, which he has served so long and faithfully.

3. That this painful regret is modified and mollified by the joy we feel in that he is a North Carolinian and that he is a son of this University, exemplifying, in his Christian career and great practical life, the worthiness of this institution as a seat of learning and in producing good citizenship.

4. That, in behalf of all the people of this Commonwealth, whose University he has rebuilded and perpetuated; in behalf of the cause of education, whose true spirit he has so efficiently aroused and spread abroad in this State; and in the name of the University, which he has done more than any other man to make and to enable others to make what it is today, we give to Dr. Battle our sincere and most heartfelt thanks;

5. That the fundamental task of the people of the Southern States, in the grim and silent years succeeding the civil war, was the task of providing for a new social order the benefits of universal education. This is the most daring task that a democracy has ever attempted. The men who undertook the carrying forward of that great undertaking in the early '70's were high-statured, sun-crowned men, and the history of the South that is to be, will give them high rank among the heroes and builders. Infinite beauty and meaning lie in the circumstance that General Lee set the example to these self-reliant men as a quiet teacher of youth at Lexington. Their problem was to convert a democracy in theory into a democracy in reality, and to persuade a people, unaccustomed to community effort, to assume responsibility for the education of all people. It was an undertaking requiring the exercise of patience, courage, enthusiasm, learning and faith. One of the foremost figures in this great rebuilding in North Carolina was Kemp P. Battle, and he incarnated just the qualities needed for this enduring work. He had the patience not to despair at small beginnings. He had the faith to believe that a rugged and honest democracy would rally at last around its chiefest institution of learning. He had the enthusiasm to inspire those around him with his faith and his patience. He had the wisdom and the insight to gather, as professors and helpers, around him young men of audacity and of determination. He had in him the heart of hope, which gave him the fortitude and the faith to see, beyond dreary days and haggard nights, the brightness of the present day, when North Carolina counts it a privilege and an opportunity to add to the power and the efficiency of her University, embodying as it does her noblest spiritual aspirations and finest traditions of public service, which day he was a great and mighty factor, under God, in hastening on.

COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

The orator of the day, Judge Martin Augustine Knapp, Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was presented to the audience by President Venable and delivered a scholarly and carefully prepared address on "Transportation". After discussing the evolution of modern methods of transportation and their influence upon social and economic conditions, the speaker devoted his attention to competition, maintaining that it is not now the life of trade. The gist of his remarks was as follows:

The old maxim that competition is the life of trade may have been all right for other days but it is now out of date. The trusts are results of legitimate tendencies and are here to stay. The problem they present is one of regulation, not elimination. The tendency resultant from expanded relations is toward a union of efforts wherein is strength. Future developments are problematical. Numerous remedies will be tried and will fail. We shrink from socialism as a remedy or government ownership. Relief will come in some form of diffused ownership and decentralized management. The principle of co-operation is the underlying one which must prevail. Commercial friction is intolerable and common dangers cause the tendency to combination. Nothing can stay the advance of industrial federation. We should not be disheartened by disclosures of corruption; the fact of their discovery augurs well. A revival of old-fashioned honesty is needed. Education will do much and likewise publicity.

RESOLUTIONS WITH REGARD TO THE DEATH OF PROFESSOR J. W. GORE ADOPTED BY THE FACULTY OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA

The committee appointed by the faculty April 15, 1908, to take suitable action on the death of Joshua Walker Gore, Professor of Physics and Dean of the School of Applied Sciences in the University of North Carolina, would submit the following resolutions:

First. In the death of Professor Gore the State loses a citizen whose influence upon its industrial life may be seen in the careers of many men who are today leaders in the scientific development of the South and who found their first inspiration in his teaching.

Second. The University of North Carolina had no more faithful teacher or efficient officer than the man whose death it now mourns and who for twenty-six years labored unceasingly for its welfare. His sympathy with his students, his devotion to the highest ideals of his department, his practical insight into the more technical detail of organization and administration make it difficult to fill his place and impossible to forget his service.

Third. As a friend and colleague the Faculty would put on record their cherished memory of the Christian gentleman whose genial disposition lightened the weight of many a common task, whose unwearying kindness of heart found expression in a constant regard for the happiness of others, and whose unalterable sense of duty will remain as an abiding example to those who shall come after him.

Fourth. It is the desire of the Faculty that an engrossed copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Gore with the assurance of a tender sympathy and of a common loss; and that copies be mailed for publication to the Baltimore Sun, the Charlotte Observer, the Raleigh News and Observer, the Biblical Recorder, the University Magazine, the Tar Heel, and the Chapel Hill News.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES

The Trustees of the University of North Carolina feel that in the death of Prof. Joshua Walker Gore, they have lost a most able and accomplished Professor, and desire to acknowledge their deep obligation for more than twenty-five years of efficient service rendered by him in the work of his department, and to the University.

He was a fine administrative officer, untiring in his efforts to provide for the comfort and welfare of the students and the community.

His example is an incentive to noble exertion, his influence tended to help all to a higher life; and his memory will remain as an inspiration to those with whom he was associated, that in doing good to others, we render most acceptable service to the Master. To his widow we extend our deepest sympathy, and request our secretary to convey to her this tribute of respect, and instruct that the same be recorded in our minutes.

J. W. Graham, Committee.

HONORARY DEGREES

The recipients of honorary degrees were presented by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith as follows:

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present to you, for the degree of Doctor of Divinity, St. Clair Hester, Rector of the Church of the Messiah, Brooklyn, New York.

"A native of Granville County, North Carolina, a bachelor of arts and master of arts of this University, a student also of the University of the City of New York and of Oxford University, Mr. Hester graduated from the General Theological Seminary of New York in 1893 and entered at once upon his life work in Brooklyn. His ministry has been one of growing influence and acceptability. After serving two years as assistant minister of the Church of the Messiah and three years as Rector of Saint George's Chapel, he was called in 1898 to the rectorship of his first charge, which position he now holds. He is also a trustee of the General Theological Seminary of New York, a member of the Standing Committee of the Episcopal Diocese of Long Island, and one of the managers of the Brooklyn Howard Colored Orphan Asylum. For his loyalty to the spiritual ideals of his alma mater, for his wholehearted consecration to the service of his fellow-men, and for his ability to interpret Bible truth in terms of organized charity as well as of formal creed, the University of North Carolina confers upon him the degree of Doctor of Divinity."

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present to you, for the degree of Doctor of Divinity, Neill McKay Watson, Pastor of the Methodist Churches on the Haw River Circuit.

"A native of Jonesboro, North Carolina, Mr. Watson received his early education as student and teacher in the Jonesboro Academy. In 1888, after attending academic courses of study in Vanderbilt University, he graduated from the Theological Department and received the Founder's Prize for the highest average grade attained in his class. He joined the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and for twenty years has labored in its bounds. His ministry at Chapel Hill extended from 1892 to 1894 and from 1901 to 1903. Without seeming effort he drew to his services during these years large and increasing audiences of students whom he held by the power of his speech and the charm of his character. His avoidance of sensationalism in every form, his careful preparation for every discourse, his sure grasp of theme, his wide range of illustration, his power of vivid description, his knowledge of student life and sympathy with student interests made him a spiritual force in University circles rarely parallelled in so short a ministry. For his influence upon the students and through them upon the future citizenship of the State, the University gratefully awards him the degree of Doctor of Divinity."

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present to you, for the degree of Doctor of Laws, Henry Groves Connor, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina.

"State senator in 1885, superior court judge from 1885 to 1893, speaker of the house of representatives in 1899, member of the legislature in 1901, and associate justice of the supreme court of North Carolina since January 1, 1903, Judge Connor embodies in his character and in his career a conspicuous example of useful and illustrious citizenship. As the author of the Connor Act of 1885, which insures security of title to all deeds, he put an end to useless litigation, won the esteem and gratitude of all classes of citizens, and inaugurated a career of increasing renown and public service. Stainless in private life, wise, patient, and just in the high office which he holds, the University of North Carolina would today add her tribute to his character and her recognition of his civic service."

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present to you, for the degree of Doctor of Laws, Platt Dickinson Walker, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of North Carolina.

"A native of New Hanover County, a student of the University of North Carolina from 1865 to 1867, Mr. Walker received his LL.B. from the University of Virginia in 1869 and was admitted to the North Carolina bar in 1870. A member of the legislature from 1874 to 1875, a trustee of the University, the first president of the North Carolina Bar Association, a doctor of laws of Davidson College, and an associate justice of the supreme court since 1902, Judge Walker has received no honor that he did not deserve and occupied no office that he did not adorn. A difficult case in law is to him an opportunity for wider knowledge and more penetrating research. He finds in the study of legal questions both his vocation and his pastime. His judicial temperament, his fairness to both sides, his clearness of statement, his unwearied search for the essential amid the unesential, and his ability to reduce complex problems to the simpler forms of elemental justice have reflected renown upon his alma mater and brought honor to his State. For these services, the University of North Carolina awards him the degree of Doctor of Laws."

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present to you, for the degree of Doctor of Laws, Louis Lyndon Hobbs, President of Guilford College, North Carolina.

"In proportion to its numbers no denomination has contributed more to the moral fiber and industrial progress of North Carolina than has the Society of Friends. In 1837 they founded in Guilford County the New Garden Boarding School, an institution which is now regarded as the pioneer in the South of coeducation. In 1888 the New Garden Boarding School became Guilford College with Mr. Hobbs as its President. A master of arts of Haverford College, he has stood for high standards of scholarship and conduct, he has been a valiant champion of public schools, and he has made the influence of Guilford College felt far beyond the boundaries of his church and of his State. In honoring him the University of North Carolina honors a worthy man, a growing institution, and a noble denomination."

"Mr. President, I have the honor to present to you, for the degree of Doctor of Laws, James Yadkin Joyner, Superintendent of Public Instruction in North Carolina.

"Graduating from the University of North Carolina in 1881, a classmate of Charles Duncan McIver and a college mate of Charles Brantley Aycock and Edwin Anderson Alderman, Mr. Joyner shared with them the new enthusiasm for public education which was just then stirring in the State and which, in the early eighties, made the University of North Carolina the fountain head of the new educational movement. Resigning the practice of law in 1889 he became superintendent of the Goldsboro Graded Schools, and from 1893 to 1902, professor of the English language and literature in the State Normal and Industrial College at Greensboro. Called to his present office in 1902, it has been his high service, more than that of any other one man, to organize and consolidate what before had been but random effort and isolated interest. To this service he has brought a keen sympathy with his fellow men, a sure insight into educational conditions, an ability to speak clearly and impressively before popular assemblies, a rare appreciation of the cultural value of good literature, and an unselfishness of spirit that makes those who know him best love him most. As a public pledge of cooperation with him in his great work, his alma mater enrolls him today among her Doctors of Laws."

The benediction was pronounced by Dr. N. M. Watson.
